

Daily Market Insight

Alexander Chepurkó, Foreign Exchange Analyst

TO SIGN UP FOR DAILY RESEARCH SENT TO YOUR EMAIL CLICK HERE

Tuesday, January 24, 2012

| Pair | Bias | Objective/Comments | Key Resistance | Key Support |
|---------|------|---|----------------|-------------|
| EUR/USD | ↓ | Higher on short-covering, lack of sellers after downgrades | 1.3090 | 1.2975 |
| USD/JPY | ↓ | Yen sold after BOJ downgraded Japanese growth outlook | 77.94 | 76.33 |
| GPB/USD | ↓ | Technical picture still damaged after dipping below key support | 1.5600 | 1.5530 |
| AUD/USD | ↓ | Failed at key 1.05 level, opens way for retest of 1.04 | 1.0500 | 1.0400 |
| USD/CAD | ↑ | Consolidation at 1.0190 seems likely | 1.0190 | 1.0053 |
| USD/CHF | ↑ | On the verge of key 0.93 level, above it would be bullish | 0.9300 | 0.9205 |

Headlines

- Euro finance ministers rejected putting up more cash for Greece
- As Brussels meeting continues, officials are trying to saddle bond holders with higher losses on Greek debt
- Eurozone PMI comes in higher than expected, boosted by German private sector growth
- Societe Generale and Credit Agricole, banks headquartered in recently downgraded France, were downgraded by S&P

Summary

More respite for the Euro comes in the form of a better than expected composite Eurozone PMI, printing above 50 for the first time since August of 2011.

The key events with which we would base further market bias this week are the FOMC rate decision tomorrow and Friday's US GDP release. Sadly, we believe US-based bankers and financial centers will continue to be disappointed over not receiving additional outright Quantitative Easing from the Fed, which should boost prospects for the US Dollar.

DISCLAIMER: This presentation and the information provided here should not be relied upon as a substitute for extensive independent research before making your investment decisions. Forex Club is merely providing this presentation for your general information. This presentation and its information do not take into account any particular individual's investment objectives, financial situation, or needs. All investors should obtain advice based on their unique situation before making any investment decisions based upon this forum or any information contained within. In addition, any projections or views of the market provided by the author may not prove to be accurate. Forex Club LLC and Alexander Chepurkó will not be responsible for any losses incurred on investments made by readers and clients as a result of any information contained in this column. Forex trading involves substantial risk of loss and is not suitable for all investors. © 2011 Forex Club, LLC. All rights reserved.

Daily Market Insight

Key Economic Events

- 10:00 – US Richmond Fed Index, 6 cons.
- 18:30 – AU Westpac Leading Index, 0.1% prior
- 19:30 – AU CPI (YoY), 3.3% cons.
- Jan. 25, 12:30 – US FOMC Rate Decision

More respite for the Euro comes in the form of a better than expected composite Eurozone PMI, printing above 50 for the first time since August of 2011. The celebration over private sector growth shouldn't be attributed to any other country besides Germany though, as that country's growth was the main benefactor to the positive figure.

Figure 1 compares the Eurozone PMI statistic to the Euro Stoxx 50 Index (red line), composed of 50 blue-chip European stocks. While the stock market tracks the PMI closely, we're not likely to be out of the woods until a clean break of the 2,500 level occurs, which would put us above a major support level that has been in effect since 2009.

Figure 1: Eurozone PMI improves above 50, Euro Stoxx 50 Index (red line)

Source: FX Club Research, Bloomberg

Looking Forward This Week

The key events with which we would base further market bias this week are the FOMC rate decision tomorrow and Friday's US GDP release, which is expected to show a 3% increase in growth of the US economy. Sadly, we believe US-based bankers and financial centers will continue to be disappointed over not receiving additional outright Quantitative Easing from the Fed, which should boost prospects for the US Dollar.

Besides receiving additional bad news from the Greek and European summits this week, US GDP should be a closely watched figure with a positive number boding well for US equities, and risk assets in general.

DISCLAIMER: This presentation and the information provided here should not be relied upon as a substitute for extensive independent research before making your investment decisions. Forex Club is merely providing this presentation for your general information. This presentation and its information do not take into account any particular individual's investment objectives, financial situation, or needs. All investors should obtain advice based on their unique situation before making any investment decisions based upon this forum or any information contained within. In addition, any projections or views of the market provided by the author may not prove to be accurate. Forex Club LLC and Alexander Chepurko will not be responsible for any losses incurred on investments made by readers and clients as a result of any information contained in this column. Forex trading involves substantial risk of loss and is not suitable for all investors. © 2011 Forex Club, LLC. All rights reserved.